INTRODUCTION.

THIS Collection was formed by Ismail Pasha, Minister of Commerce and Public Works in Turkey, with the exception of some that were added by the present proprietor. The Pasha's Sassanian Coins, which are often referred to by Mordtmann in his work on that subject, have been withdrawn as unsuitable for the English market. A large portion of the Roman Coins, and one of the Greek were rejected and sent back to Smyrna on account of their bad condition. After these deductions, the entire collection is comprised in this catalogue, and the writer is authorised to state that there will be no reserves. Great care has been taken to exclude false coins; but if any coin should be suspected at the time of sale, it is to be withdrawn, as Mr. Whittall will not consent to sell as false what he is confident to be genuine. This observation applies also to Lot 293, in which instance alone the writer differs from his employer as to the authenticity of any coin contained herein.

The condition of the coins being generally good is not often mentioned, unless they are particularly rare, or better preserved than is usual with the same types; but all defects are carefully pointed out, so that purchasers at a distance may rest assured that they will not find their coins over described.

The collection contains too many rare and valuable coins to allow the writer to direct attention to all. It may be sufficient therefore to mention here the Silver Alexander I. and Gold Demetrius of Macedon; the Lycian coins; the Tetradrachma of Tryphon; the supposed unique coin of Marathus; and the Egyptian Octodrachmæ.

* * * The last coin is unpublished. The preceding is described in the Numismatic Chronicle, vol. xviii, p. 139, where it is stated that only three specimens were known. For the attribution, see the learned Catalogue of Colonel Leake's Collection, in which he judiciously suggests that the "Καὶ Μνασκίρης" of Lucian, should be read "Καμνασκίρης." Colonel Leake calls the King, Capnascires. On the smaller of these coins, the third letter is more like Π than Μ. The other has missed that part of the legend; but the specimens described in Num. Chron. are said to have Μ distinct. For the convenience of identification, the spelling adopted in the Numismatic Chronicle has been followed here; but, to be consistent, we ought either to call the King Kamnaskires or Camnascires.
